

EXPLORE OUR HERITAGE

Whether you're searching for fine antique furnishings or like to comb through racks and boxes of curious items in the hunt for smaller treasures, you'll find plenty of opportunities here in Hancock County.

Located on the western end of Indiana's famed "Antique Alley" which stretches some 50 miles from Indianapolis to Richmond along historic U.S. 40, Hancock County is rich with heritage. And it's also rich in possibilities if you're hoping to find that perfect item or the elusive piece you need to fill out your collection.

From fine furniture and glassware to collectible ceramics and rustic primitives, Hancock County promises a treasure hunter's playground with antique shops along the "Old National Road" in Greenfield and Philadelphia and in McCordsville and other local communities – and all within less than a half-hour's drive. There's everything from heirloom quality furnishings to bargains galore and they're just waiting for you to search them out, hold them, feel their history and take them home.

But whether you're connecting with the past, adding to a prized collection or simply acquiring antiques for investment purposes, there's something for you here.

Equally fascinating are Hancock County's numerous collectibles shops. Catering to somewhat more modern and sometimes more modestly priced items, collectibles are rapidly becoming one of the fastest-growing aspects of the antiques market. Hancock County offers a wide selection of these opportunities. From excellent handcrafted items to those niche collecting areas, we're a top destination for treasure hunters of all types and all interests.

So take your time, meander through the shops and fine stores, explore our history, touch our past and experience Indiana's "Antique Alley" from the Heart of the Crossroads – Hancock County.

Enjoy!
